

Prospects Good For Winter Sports Season

EARLY SNOW TRAINS IN PROSPECT

Indications are that Grayling is going to have a big winter sports season this winter. With the early arrival of cold weather and prospects for a normal snow fall, activities at the park will be starting early.

Earl Kirby, president of the Kirby Travel Bureau, promoters of snow trains from Detroit and other cities to the Grayling park, has arranged to continue his snow trains over the Michigan Central railroad for the coming season. He says his contract with the Michigan Central system this year will permit him to run several sections a Sunday and carry 3000 or more persons each week at the season's peak. Special snow trains will be run on Saturdays or other week days for special groups.

The winter park is to be considerably enlarged. The parking area and skating rink will be enlarged and three new toboggan slides built. With the aid of CCC workers much improvement will be made in the park this year.

Clarence Johnson who is to be manager of the park during the coming season, already has started to work and his men are busy repairing the water lines. This work must be pushed before the ground becomes too frozen.

Since the park closed last season, thieves have carried away about 1,000 feet of heavy copper electric wire. Also about $25.00 worth of window glass has been broken, evidently by mischievous youngsters. These will have to be replaced, entailing considerable expense and labor.

Baker-Corwin.

Miss Mildred Corwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Corwin of this city, became the bride of Mr. Eugene Baker of Indianapolis Thanksgiving Day, before an altar banked with ferns and chrysanthemums, at the Michigan Memorial Church. Reverend Edgar Flory read the service, at which members of the immediate families were present. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Duncan, of Birmingham, sister and brother-in-law of the groom.

The bride was very attractive in a Dubonnet suit, with black accessories, wearing an orchid on her shoulder. Mrs. Duncan choosing black and matching accessories, wearing a shoulder corsage of pink and white fall flowers.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at Shoppenagons Inn, an attractive tiered wedding cake forming the centerpiece of a long table, with yellow and white chrysanthemums in crystal bowls at each end, flanked with tall white tapers in crystal candelabra. Following the dinner the couple left for Indianapolis, Indiana, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Baker is a graduate of Grayling high school, and Central State Teachers college, and before her marriage a kindergarten teacher in the Lansing schools. Mr. Baker is a graduate of Michigan State college, and is connected with the firm of Ernst and Ernst, in Indianapolis. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baker of Bay City.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baker of Bay City; Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Duncan, of Birmingham, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baker and son, of Pontiac.

GIERKE HOME SCENE OF HAPPY GATHERING

Beautiful in its appointments was the wedding dinner Sunday at the Adam Gierke home, celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Gierke. The centerpiece was a huge three-tier wedding cake with love birds, orange blossoms and tiny bells in white and gold forming the decoration, and in the center of the top layer were double gold wedding rings. Guarding the cake were gold tapers in crystal candelabra. Besides the immediate family, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Shaw, who observed their golden wedding during the month of November, were guests.

The celebration of the joyous event really began on Saturday when the sons and daughters arrived to remain over the weekend, and that evening a few friends dropped in and visiting and feasting were enjoyed.

Those from out of town who came to be in attendance at the festivities included Postmaster and Mrs. Frank Gierke, Manitowish; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rasmussen and daughters Phyllis and Shirley, Marquette; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Jeambert and daughter Joyce, Detroit; Earl Gierke, Saginaw. With the sons and daughters and their wives and husbands who reside in Grayling there was a household. In the olden days when the children were all at home, that home was the scene of many a jolly gathering; for hospitality Mr. and Mrs. Gierke could not be excelled. They were always happiest when the house was full of young people and there was song in the air, and the household rang with laughter. These are memories that Mr. and Mrs. Gierke cherish. May they live on to spend many more happy years together is the wish of hosts of friends.

SECOND LESSON ON HOME FURNISHINGS

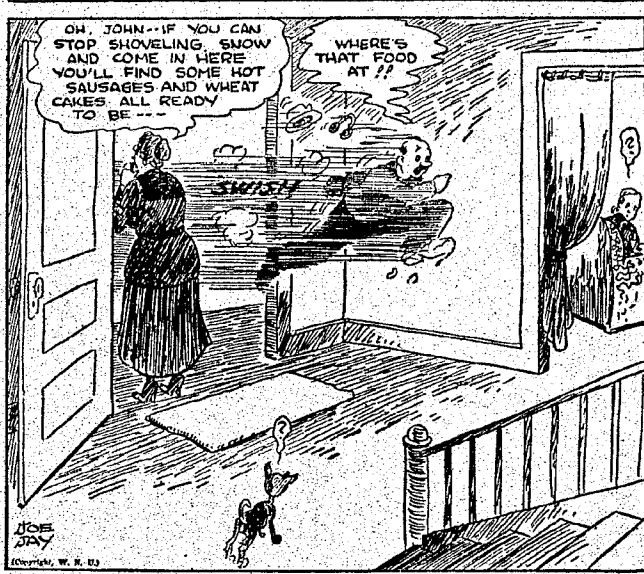

Held At Courthouse Tuesday, December 7th

Miss Alice Hertzler, Home Extension Agent, will give the second lesson in a series of lessons on Home Furnishings, sponsored by the Extension Department of Michigan State College at Grayling in the Courthouse on Tuesday, December 7, to the leaders of Crawford county. The meeting will start at 10 o'clock in the morning. This lesson will deal with color in the home.

Miss Hertzler believes that every home can be made more attractive by adding color. By following a few simple guides, beautiful color combinations may be made that will add beauty to home decorations. Color may be used to conceal conspicuous and ugly furnishings. The family take pleasure in harmonious colors because they introduce cheer, interest and restfulness into a home.

Cuba entertained more than 150,000 tourists during the 1937 season.

Kiwanians Plan Christmas Party

The Kiwanis club will hold a Christmas party Wednesday evening, December 22nd, according to plans decided upon at the regular meeting of the club Wednesday. H. Fick, Roy Milnes and Amos Hunter comprise the committee of arrangement. At that time the families of the members will be invited. Just what the committee will plan has not been decided but no doubt Santa Claus will be present with valuable gifts for all.

One of the features of the meeting Wednesday was a talk by Dr. Clippert, past president of the club on "What Constitutes a Good President." This talk he had given previously before the clubs of the 8th district held in Traverse City, November 22nd.

Owing to a conflict of duties, Farnum Matson, who had been elected secretary for the coming year, had to withdraw. His hours at the postoffice would not enable him to be in attendance regularly on Wednesday noons. Roy O. Milnes was appointed to the position.

On next Wednesday noon the program will be in charge of the Agricultural committee of which Amos Hunter is the chairman. This promises to be an interesting program and it is hoped that every member of the club will be present. The privilege of inviting others to this meeting is extended to the members of the club.

Local Drivers Must Know Road Rules

UNABLE TO PASS TESTS, 300,000 MOTORISTS WILL BE OFF HIGHWAYS

How many Grayling motorists will be among the 300,000 in the state denied the privilege of driving when the administration of the 1937 operators' license law becomes effective Jan. 1? Oscar G. Olander, commissioner of public safety, estimates there will be about that many who will be kept off state roads because they will not be able to pass the written test before their operators' licenses are renewed.

But that will not be the most important result of the new legislation, according to Olander, who says:

"The law, in our opinion, will make better drivers out of the others who are able to pass the examination. When you improve the driving conditions for more than 2,000,000 motor vehicle operators that, in our judgment, is the greater accomplishment."

Will Improve Themselves

"We do not minimize the value of excluding probably 300,000 incompetent drivers from the highways. But those who pass the examination will improve themselves, particularly if they are near the non-passing grade. The efficiency of those who succeed in meeting the tests certainly will be increased."

Olander has begun circulating the police booklet "Rules of the Road." This publication is included with each set of 1938 license plates. Representatives of such organizations as the association of circuit judges, prosecutors, sheriffs and police chiefs have approved the booklet.

Under the statute Olander is given the responsibility of enforcement. He will name the examining officers throughout the state.

"Rules of the Road" will be the basis of the examinations that motorists applying for drivers' licenses will be required to pass. In addition to a list of questions that must be answered in writing, the license applicant will be examined as to vision, hearing, understanding of highway signs, etc.

"Traffic accidents are not confined to any one class of drivers," Olander said. "The reasons assigned for collisions are failure to observe stop signs before entering through highways, driving on the wrong side of the highway, cutting out of traffic because one is in a hurry or the driver ahead is proceeding too slowly, and refusing to dim lights when approaching another car."

State police look upon the new law as a fair program and, one that should be adopted by the motoring public because it will provide greater safety for the 2,000,000 car drivers.

John Kolka Passed Away

John Kolka, age 57 years, a resident of Grayling since 1922, passed away at his home Sunday night. Mr. Kolka had been ailing for about a year, and of late although he had been up and around his home, he had not been able to do any work.

Mr. Kolka was born at Otsego Lake, May 10, 1880, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kolka. He was united in marriage to Sarah Taylor April 4, 1909 and to the union three children were born. The family moved to Grayling from Deward in 1922 and this has been their home since. He was employed on the railroad section up to about five years ago; the family lived on US 27 near the airport, and since that time he had engaged in raising cattle. A couple of years ago they bought the Gavenda home, where Mr. Kolka passed away.

Surviving the deceased besides his widow are two daughters and a son, Mrs. Ivan Billman of Roscommon; Miss Elizabeth and William at home, who have the sympathy of many friends. Also one brother, three sisters and two step-brothers survive, Martin Kolka residing in the West, and Mrs. Jess Steadman, South Bend, Ind.; Mrs. Frank Brown, Saginaw; Mrs. Wilson Warner, Flint, and John and Joe Kolka of Grayling. Funeral services were held Monday morning at St. Mary's church and interment was in Elmwood cemetery.

Mrs. Frank Brown of Saginaw and Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor and son Chris, of East Jordan, came to be in attendance at the funeral.

Improved roads in China are five times as long as in 1920.

Hunters Must Report.

Deer hunters who have not yet reported on their luck—good or bad—during the season just closed are reminded that they are required to do so under an act of the last state legislature.

Those who killed bucks may not need much urging to put the fact on record, but the reports of those who came back from the northern deer areas empty-handed are equally important. Every hunter is required to fill out the report card which was attached to his license and mail it to the department of conservation before Feb. 15. Hunters who fail to do so are committing a misdemeanor.

The act applies not alone to deer hunters, but to all hunters of big and small game, birds and fur-bearing animals, and also to trappers. The report cards attached to small game licenses inquire into the number and kinds of animals and birds taken. Those on the deer and bear licenses provided for a report on both the 1936 and 1937 seasons.

Data accumulated in the reports will assist state game specialists in research work and will contribute importantly to the gaining of a more complete picture of hunting and trapping conditions throughout the state.

Basket Ball Season Officially Opened

The lid was officially pried off the basketball season last Wednesday night as Grayling split a two-game attraction with the Mancelona basketball team. Grayling won the Reserve game 23 to 9 but Mancelona countered with a triumph in the more important conference game between the first string teams by a count of 17 to 13. All in all it was good entertainment for a pretty excited crowd, and the large Mancelona delegation went home in rare good humor.

Grayling stepped out into an early lead which was often threatened but didn't melt away until the last quarter. It was 7-6 at the half way station and it stayed close until the Orange and Black drew away in the last eight minutes. The official margin was four points, 17-13, but the scoreboards recorded 15 to 13 and the crowd was vocal in the extreme as the Grayling team peppered the basket from all angles without quite getting the ball down for points.

Grayling's Reserves stepped out into an early lead and then kept rolling up the score with a consistent and steady offense that left no doubt as to the outcome. It was too bad that the Reserves couldn't have given their big brothers a dozen of their unneeded points.

The refereeing was capably handled by Ernie Blohm of Harbor Springs, which incidentally, is where Coach Cornell's boys make their next appearance. This is also a conference game and should be close. The team will be on the road for its games until after Christmas, but local fans are going to get their chance to see the Green and White team in action.

Add Childrens Ward To Mercy Hospital

One of the nicest features to be added to Grayling Mercy hospital in many years is the newly arranged children's ward. This is located on the third floor.

It provides six, brand new, modern child beds, in light green enamel. Also appropriate furniture and leather seated comfortable chairs in colors to match. The beds may be adjusted to positions as may be required.

This room is glassed in so that visitors may look at the children without having to enter, in cases in which the patients should not be disturbed. A connecting room, also glassed in, provides a dressing room for the children with electrically warmed table for warming the clothing and for dressing the children.

Every modern hospital comfort for the care of infants and children is provided in this department—apparently nothing has been forgotten.

This excellent feature was planned and furnished by Mrs. E. J. Marshall of Toledo and adds greatly to some of her former contributions to the hospital. Among her other benefactions are a room called the "boy's room," which too is completely furnished with modern hospital beds, furniture and lockers; the men's ward all similarly furnished and equipped, and a room on the first floor. Each of these rooms besides its furnishings, has been appropriately decorated and the windows hung with harmonizing and pleasing window curtains and drapes.

These not only add to the assets of the hospital but they add much comfort and pleasantness for those patients who occupy them.

I. W. L. To Hold Final Meeting

BANQUET AND BOXING ON PROGRAM

The final meeting of the Izaak Walton League Chapter will be held on Thursday night, Dec. 9th. It is planned at this writing to hold a venison banquet at the American Legion Hall at 6:30 o'clock which will be followed by a short but important business meeting.

Don't forget that the new officers for the coming year will be nominated at this meeting and be present to vote for those that you wish to have at the head of your Chapter the coming year. Also some important conservation matters will be discussed for action relative to changes in the deer laws. Remember, if you don't attend the Chapter's meetings and action is taken that does not meet with your approval, you have no one but yourself to blame.

After the banquet and business meeting, an entertainment will follow consisting of five boxing bouts and a couple of wrestling matches. This, it is hoped, will be the start of a boxing tournament that will continue through the winter months, and it is planned to invite Gaylord, Roscommon, and Kalkaska to enter the tournaments.

Don't forget that many of the present memberships expire the first of the new year and word has been received recently from National Headquarters that the membership year has been changed from January to April. This means that when you renew your membership this year that you will have a fifteen month's membership for the price of a yearly membership of $2.50.

Everyone plan on being present for the banquet, December ninth, and witness the first boxing tournament held in Grayling for years. Bring along a friend who you think would be interested in joining our Chapter. We have a membership now of 113 members and let's make it 175 for the next year.

Notice of the December 9th meeting will be mailed to all members on the eighth as a reminder. In order to know how many places to be set at the banquet table, make your reservations now by notifying Axel Peterson, Harley Russell or R. A. Wright.

"Take Him Out!" That's what the fans yelled when Lester Patrick's son played his first game of big league hockey. He expected that but just read what happened later, in the article by the coach of the New York Rangers. His article appears in This Week, the colorgrave magazine with next Sunday's Detroit News.

STALEY HAUGH.

(The Ingham County News of Mason in a recent editorial paid a very fine tribute to Staley Haugh, whose death was reported in the Avalanche. It is a privilege to pass this on to our readers.—Editor).

This entire community was shocked late last week at the news of the death of D. Staley Haugh, senior student at Michigan State college. The campus, too, was plunged into a cloud of grief for Staley was popular and well known at the college. He was liked by the students and admired by the faculty. That he had a brilliant career before him, none doubted.

While a student in Mason high school, Staley displayed a talent for the stage. Entering Michigan State, he took up as his major courses those designed to train him for the journalistic field. He was elected to the editorial staff of the Michigan State News, college journal. He was active in student dramatic circles. He was called upon frequently to assist in college radio broadcasts. He was elected to fraternal and campus offices. And yet with all these activities he managed to earn for himself well rated grades in class work.

Never physically strong, Staley was tenderly protected against over-exertion in his younger days. Never since he was a child is it probable that he felt himself in possession of full health. Nevertheless he was ever cheerful, always had a smiling good morning for every one he knew, young and old alike. He carried his work with distinction, he won friends among his classmates, his teachers and the people of the community. At college he earned an enviable position among college folk from the lowest to the highest.

Like the good trouper he was, he carried on to the last. As death stalked his bedside on Friday night there went out over the air from East Lansing a nationwide radio broadcast, featuring his beloved State, a program on which he had worked long and well. Even after he died there appeared in his college weekly, his own column written just before he took to his bed, a column on the theater headed "Sock and Buskin". A heavy type "30" stands above his last release but that is the only evidence of anything except his old cheerful self although even as he wrote it he was suffering terribly.

Nothing that can be said will assuage the grief of his parents. Nothing that can be said will make less heavy the grief which his hosts of friends felt at his going. But Staley would not have liked to have had the show stopped as death came to him in the very midst of its presentation last Friday. He would not have left it if his column had been left out of his college paper. He suffered and he smiled. He accepted his physical weaknesses, his recurrent illnesses, his bodily handicaps and he made the best of them. He smiled even as pain wracked his frail body. He possessed a gentle soul, an indomitable will, a love of friends, a fine intellect, a keen appreciation of the arts—and he made the most of these while he lived.—Ingham County News, Mason, Mich.

FREDERIC SCHOOL

High School Carnival December 9

The annual High School Carnival for the benefit of the Athletic Association, will be held in the Frederic gymnasium Thursday, December 9. It is to be started out by a very mystifying one-act play that is very interesting as well as thrilling. There will also be some short numbers. We have a world of entirely new prizes for the fish pond and we will again have a country store.

There are to be numerous games of skill, one of which is a new shooting gallery where the player tries his skill at ringing the bell with an air pistol. There will also be the bowling alley again this year as well as a chance to try their skill at bursting balloons. Then of course at the lunch stand will be home-made ice cream, home-made candy, hot dogs and coffee, and home-made pie.

There will be a slight charge of admittance to the program which is to start at 8:00 o'clock, but anyone wishing to come to the carnival only may do so by waiting until after the program and may enter free of charge. We hope to have a real peppy crowd out as we are buying new suits again this year and want to get them paid for as soon as possible.

Basketball Game Friday Night

The Frederic High basketball team entertains Houghton Lake at Frederic, Friday, Dec. 3. There will be both a first and a second team to play Friday night and we look forward to a good game. We expect to have our new suits here by then and hope to break them in in a good way. Frederic has won two games thus far this season, beating out Johannesburg High on Nov. 19 by a score of 15 to 6 and St. Mary's High of Gaylord on Nov. 23 by a score of 23 to 19.

We have printed little pocket schedules containing this year's basketball schedule and also the names of the boys' squad and of the girls' squad. There is also a place to keep a record of the score of the various games. These schedules are to be given out free to all who pay admittance to the game Friday night.

Remember it is not too late to take advantage of the money saving venture of buying a season's ticket. A 4-H Club was organized in Frederic Friday, Nov. 19, with a large number joining. There will be a boys' handicraft club, and two girls clubs, and there is quite a demand for a hot lunch club so arrangements are being made to organize such a club. Meetings are to be held the last period on Friday afternoons.

Prizes were awarded this week to the winners in the Magazine Sale contest. Those who sold enough subscriptions to receive a prize were: Doris Leng, Louise McCormick, Iris Nephew, Lucy Cassidy, Jack Duncley, Alan Leng, and John Selley. Congratulations folks, we hope you enjoy your prizes.

Bullets Interrupt Sunday Dinner

While eating dinner Sunday the Herbert Ferguson family of Beaver Creek had quite a scare. Something hit the roof and side-walls of their home and it sounded like bullets. However, Mr. Ferguson did not care to go out into the open or near a window until the firing had subsided, and when he did he found three bullet holes in the side of the house and two in the roof. Luckily the ones in the side walls hit 2x4's otherwise they probably would have gone through the house and caused injury or fatality to someone.

After Mr. Ferguson was sure that whoever was doing the shooting was through, he went in the direction of from where the shots had come. Outside of the John Canfield home, over a quarter of a mile away, were some hunters and when Mr. Ferguson made inquiry if any shooting had been going on, one hunter said he had been shooting at a bird house for a mark. Seems this was pretty careless on the part of the hunter. However no arrest was made.

Only Unhealthy Oysters Are Producers of Pearls

Oriental poets used to say that pearls grew from dew-drops swallowed by the oysters. Actual fact proves that only unhealthy oysters produce pearls; essentially those with crumpled shells, writes Edward Samuel in the Illustrated Weekly of India. The growth is the result of grit, sand grains or splinters being driven into the mantle or flap of skin in the oyster. The foreign substance becomes coated with mother-of-pearl.

The pearling industry is a double-headed one, pearls and shells—with shell as the main item and pearls as subsidiary. The first shell in Australia was gathered by natives at low tide, and when this supply was exhausted, they waded and dived for it. Still later, they dived from boats in two or three fathoms of water, and early profits were enormous.

Forty or fifty feet was the limit for native divers, but the shell went much deeper. The Japs adopted close-fitting goggles, but over fifty years ago regular diving dress was adopted. Fully clad in this suit, with glass-fronted helmet and air pipe, down goes the diver. On arrival at the bottom the "Safe Down" signal is jerked on the guide rope.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

by Thornton W. Burgess

REDDY FOX HIDES

REDDY FOX stole swiftly through the Green Forest in the direction of the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Reddy took the greatest care to keep out of sight of all the other little forest and meadow people. It would not do to let one of them see him because—well, because you know, he was supposed to be down on the Green Meadows. He had said that he had a very important errand down there which prevented him going to look for Buster Bear as Prickly Porky had asked him to. Of course he hadn't had any errand down on the Green Meadows. It was just an excuse. The truth is he was afraid to look for Buster Bear. And so he had made up that excuse.

Then Jumper the Hare, who, you know, is one of the most timid of all the little people who live in the Green Forest, had offered to go look for Buster Bear. Reddy Fox didn't believe that Jumper really would dare do it, but if he should why Reddy knew that everybody would say that he was a greater coward than Jumper, and would laugh at him ever after. There was just one thing to do and that was to give Jumper such a fright that he would forget all about Buster Bear. So as soon as he was out of sight of the other little people Reddy had turned into the Green Forest and run as fast as ever he could to head off Jumper the Hare.

Now, Reddy couldn't have done this had Jumper started in a great hurry to look for Buster Bear, because fast as Reddy can run Jumper can run faster. But Jumper had not been in a hurry and so it happened that Reddy was nicely hidden behind a big pile of brush when Jumper came hopping alone. When Reddy saw him coming he smiled and it was a wicked hungry smile. He had started out to scare Jumper, if he could. Jumper would make a very good dinner. Yes, indeed, he would make a splendid dinner. Reddy's mouth watered at the thought.

Now it isn't for nothing that old Mother Nature gives things to her children and so, of course, there is a reason for the long ears of Jumper the Hare. It is that he may be able to hear the slightest noise so that he can run away from danger, for you know he cannot fight. So as he came through the Green Forest he kept stopping every few jumps to look and listen. He had almost reached the pile of brush behind which Reddy was hiding when his long ears caught just the teeniest weeniest sound. Perhaps in his eagerness Reddy rustled a tiny dead leaf. Anyway, Jumper stopped short and looked very hard at the pile of brush. Reddy held his breath and his yellow eyes looked very fierce and hungry. Still Jumper sat there looking and looking and looking. It seemed to Reddy as if he never would move.

Just as Reddy had about made up his mind to rush out and try to catch Jumper where he sat a heavy step sounded behind him. Reddy turned his head hastily. There was the big black stranger who had come to live in the Green Forest. Reddy didn't need to be told that it was Buster Bear. He gave one hasty look at the great claws on Buster's feet and then with a yelp of fright he tucked his tail between his legs and started for home as fast as he could run, the most frightened fox who ever ran through the Green Forest.

First Balloon Flight

On October 15, 1783, the first actual ascent was made when Pilate de Rozier made several captive ascents in a Mongolfier balloon in Paris. On November 21, 1783, the first free ascent was made by de Rozier and the Marquis d'Arlandes, who, ascending from the Chateau de la Muette, made a voyage lasting about 20 minutes.

Ask Support for 1937 Christmas Seal Sale

MAKING HIS initial public appearance under the auspices of two attractive young ladies apparently gives a great deal of satisfaction to the town crier, whose hale, hearty figure appears on 65,000,000 Tuberculosis Christmas seals distributed throughout the state this year by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association and its affiliated organizations. As always, proceeds from the sale will be used to finance the extensive anti-tuberculosis program of the Association, soon to enter its thirty-first year of activity.

Appropriate, indeed, is the 1937 Christmas seal design. The sturdy town crier symbolizes health and protection from disease, while the house in the background may well represent every Michigan home. Prominent, too, is the red double-barred cross, symbol everywhere of anti-tuberculosis work.

Since 1931 Christmas seals have financed 32,000 diagnostic chest X-rays—all taken with the portable unit of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association—for Michigan people. Findings of the Association revealed 6,137 cases of some form of tuberculosis, 621 of which were serious, adult type cases of the disease. Every effort was made by the Association to provide modern treatment in a sanatorium for these persons. "Through early discovery, made possible by Christmas seals, the 5,516 cases of the less dangerous childhood type of the disease were given the opportunity to halt any further advance of the White Plague," Dr. Bruce H. Douglas, president of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, declared. "Only a minimum amount of precaution is needed to check the onset of tuberculosis when it is detected early by modern weapons, the tuberculin test and the X-ray." To avoid the added expense of a follow-up letter, all who received Christmas seals through the mail are being urged to make their returns as soon as possible.

Frederic Notes

Dan Pratt, long a respected citizen of this place, was found in his cabin in the country in a very low condition, having been extremely sick from Monday till Friday. Only two armfuls of wood had remained unburned in the house. Dr. Stealy and local residents have brought comfort to the man and he is now much improved, being able to sit up part of the time.

Albert Madill's new home now has the walls pretty well completed. They are cement block trimmed with red brick. The house has steel window frames.

Cicada's Love Call Can Be Heard for Five Miles

The male 17-year locust, or cicada, weighs at maturity just about one-tenth of one ounce. Yet he is equipped with a sound-producing apparatus that can be heard, under favorable atmospheric conditions, at a distance of five miles, notes a writer in the Washington Post. It is the insect's love call; the call to its mate wherever she happens to be at the moment. And if she is within a five-mile range—the range of his voice—she is expected to distinguish it from tens of thousands of other cicada love calls, all drumming simultaneously, and hasten to his side.

The noise is made with the aid of the insect's hollow abdomen, on which he beats a rat-a-tat, rat-a-tat, somewhat like a gorilla beating its chest. The cicada's "drum" is one of the most complicated inventions of Mother Nature. Its sounding board is a tympanum set on the abdomen. The beating is done by a vibrating muscle.

Only the male cicada can make this drumming sound. The female has no love call. But she has, instead, a radio receiving set inside her head and she tunes to the sensitivity necessary to pick up the love call of her mate.

The male actually has two drums fastened to his abdomen, and to each of them is attached a strong muscle which the insect can tighten at will. Each drum is a piece of thin membrane free at one edge, and by rapid vibration of them a sound is produced that has been likened to drumming on a tin pan.

The 17-year locust enjoys only six weeks of open-air life and then dies of old age.

There are about 30 distinct "broods" of the 17-year locust in the United States, appearing in different years.

Moscow expects a tremendous building boom in 1938.

Mounting living costs are accompanying the return of prosperity in India.

Fire Was an Old Way of Flashing Night Messages

Fire was early adopted as a means of sending messages by night. A flaming branch, waved about the head, became the forerunner of complicated systems of signaling with torches. An arrow, dipped in pitch, ignited and shot into the air, was the first step toward modern rocket signals. The campfire itself, used originally for warmth only, led the way for the development of far-reaching systems of beacons.

The lantern hung in the tower of Old North church, Boston, as a warning to Paul Revere, is one of the classic examples which American history affords of the use of lights for signaling at night.

Beacon fires are said to have carried the news of the fall of Troy to Argos. They helped to provide the communication that gave solidarity to the vast Roman empire. They were used extensively by the Gauls. One of the most dramatic records in communication history tells how the news of the sighting of the Spanish Armada, in 1588, was flashed, from hill to hill and tower to tower, from Plymouth to London and other parts of England by means of flaming beacons.

Cat's Tail as Medicine

It is considered unlucky in Lancashire to allow a cat to die in the house, and still more so to allow one to pass in front of a funeral. Black cats are lucky—and the tail of one is a certain cure for styes if the eyes are stroked with it, asserts a writer in Pearson's London Weekly. But goats are unlucky and to be avoided, less for their butting abilities as for the fact that once every twenty-four hours they visit the devil to have their beards combed, and are consequently fond of bad company. Every day has its superstitions. Thursday has a lucky hour—the hour before sunrise, but Monday is usually considered unfavorable, especially for first meetings. Tuesdays and Thursdays make good days for weddings; Wednesday is a bad day to start a journey.

Pepper Heated History's Forge

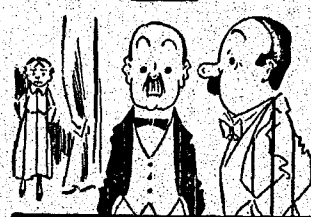

Pepper to you is just another condiment in the pantry, but once upon a time it was coveted by kings and explorers laid down their lives to get the precious seasoning. When the Eastern Roman empire fell, Alaric the Goth exacted 3,000 pounds of pepper as part of the tribute. The Peppers' Guild of London, organized in 1180, was for many centuries the most powerful of the trade guilds. Portugal sent Vasco da Gama to find a water route to India so that the pepper supply might be more abundant. A pound of the seasoning once paid for a year's rent of land or a house in England.

Great Horned Owl Named "The Tiger of the Air"

Sometimes called "the tiger of the air" and the "evil genius of the woods," the great horned owl is by nature sullen and savage. If placed in captivity, it never forgives its captors and may even be treacherous. In the wild, its food consists of rats, mice and gophers, fish, birds, and even an occasional skunk. It likes to feed on chickens in settled areas. To offset this damaging evidence as far as man is concerned, the great horned owl is an avowed enemy of crows and grackles. The crows themselves recognize this by gangling up on an owl whenever they find one in the woods.

The young of this bird sometimes feed on night-flying insects. Since the young are said to begin hooting when they are about four months old, the insect-hawking owls will utter a screaming cry. When this is heard in the dark, the cry is often puzzling to listeners.

Despite its general disfavor among men, the owls deserve high praise in their devotion to eggs and young at nesting time, asserts a writer in the Detroit Free Press. Sometimes, they begin nesting as early as February, when they may be exposed to fierce storms and low temperatures, often for days at a time. It is a marvel how the eggs are kept from freezing in a nest exposed, as it usually is, in the top of a tall, bare tree. Only the most devoted, unswerving attention to duty can save them. In defense of their young, these owls will attack almost any intruders. After spending about a month in the nest, the young begin to fly, but accompany their parents for a time only until they learn to forage for themselves.

The Telescope

The invention of the telescope—usually attributed to Galileo, who first exhibited it, in its completed form, in 1609—aroused new interest in communication by visible signals. By the end of the Seventeenth century, these instruments were fairly common throughout Europe, and several signal systems, based on their use, had been suggested. About 1690, Amontons, a member of the French academy, devised a system, the simplest form of which consisted merely of hoisting flags or placards bearing large letters, to be read by telescope and relayed from station to station. He demonstrated his system before the Dauphin in the Luxembourg gardens, Paris. Shortly before this, Hooke, an English physicist, had invented a system made up of a line of high towers, each holding a frame on which twenty-six figures representing the letters of the alphabet were to be hung and the message spelled out.

Grease Paints Oldest

Grease paint may fairly claim to be the oldest kind of paint. It is only reasonable to suppose—and this is borne out by the present practice of savage tribes—that the earliest paints may have been pigments mixed with grease or fat. Such a paint adheres to the human skin with considerable persistence, yet it may be removed by thorough washing. Of this nature are the grease-paints used by actors.

Children in Court

Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Juvenile authorities are still hunting for two young hitch hikers who held up and tied a business man who had given them a ride.

Hours later the merchant was found securely bound to a tree where his assailants had left him. He was fortunate that they had not taken his life to cover up the theft of his money and automobile.

So long as the public encourages boys to stand on corners and thumb rides, the younger generation will continue to expect something for nothing. Furthermore, with the problem of transportation solved by friendly motorists, thousands of boys are likely to throw off all family ties and develop into ordinary vagabonds.

Vandyke Brown Pigment

Vandyke brown is an earth pigment of a rich, deep brown. It takes its name from the old Dutch master, Vandyke, who used the color with remarkable effect. It is of bog origin and contains iron and bitumen. It is excellent for glazing old bronze effects and for staining to imitate old English, antique and bog oaks. When used to color a white base, the tints have a lustrous, tender tinge.

LICENSE TEST FUNDS BEING ACCUMULATED

An indication of the sums various cities and counties of Michigan will eventually have for the purchase of equipment for the examination of applicants for operators' and chauffeurs' licenses, is given from collection records of the Department of State.

The 1937 legislature, in amending the motor vehicle licensing act, stipulated that those portions of license fees refunded to local governments by the state, must be used for the enforcement of the provisions of the new licensing law. State Police and Department of State officials, in cooperation with other agencies, are framing examination procedure in accordance with authority of the new law which went into effect July 20.

Local governments receive 15 cents from each operator's and chauffeur's license issued by the state. These returns must be earmarked by local governments, for use as directed in the law's enforcement, the accumulation for this purpose beginning with the effective date of the licensing law amendments.

For the first ten months of this year, the state has returned a total of $87,770 to local governments. Sums to some of the larger counties follow: Wayne, $34,327; Kent, $2,983; Oakland, $3,365; and Ingham, $2,815.

Gas Dealers' Blanks To Be Distributed

Registration blanks for wholesale gasoline dealers will be distributed by the Department of State shortly, so as to avoid any possibility of delay in registration before the Jan. 1, 1938 deadline. Blanks for retail dealers are available at the Department at the present.

Gutenberg Changed His Name

Investigations tend to show that Johannes Gutenberg changed his real name, Hans Ganszleisch de Sulglock, for political reasons and assumed the name of his mother's family, Gutenberg.

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

THERE'S only one thing to do, when you're caught red-handed in the midst of forgetting a date. You simply have to do your best to hide the evidence.

If, for example, it was a dinner date, and the lad turns up just as you are about to pop a potato on the stove of your own little kitchenette, dump everything down the sink, and tell the boy friend that you were just fixing up some face lotion. . . That you won't be a minute. And then, for land sakes, hurry with your dressing. If it's a steak you're cooking, that's harder. But maybe you can persuade him it was for a dog or a cat or a sick neighbor. Do try. We hate to see these crestfallen lads who lose their assurance because girls forget dates with them.

Some girls, we know, forget dates purposely. But this is a habit we frown upon. If that's the way they feel, they shouldn't make the dates in the first place. We believe in honor among the parasites.

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE

By Roger B. Whitman

AUTOMATIC HEAT

ONE of the greatest advances in house heating in recent years is in so-called automatic heat; that is, an arrangement by which a house is maintained at an even temperature with no thought or effort by any member of the household. The most important device is a thermostat, which can be applied to a heater of any kind; a heater that burns fuel of any description.

A thermostat is an electric switch that is operated by the temperature of the air that surrounds it. This electric switch controls a mechanism at the heater that opens and closes the dampers, or turns a stoker or an oil burner on and off.

The thermostat is put on a wall five feet from the floor, in a part of the house where the temperature is average for all of the rooms. As the temperature of the air rises to the degree for which the thermostat is set, usually 70 degrees, the switch acts and shuts off the draft, or turns off the motor of an oil burner, or stoker. The house then cools off; but when the air around the thermostat has dropped a little, usually by two degrees, the switch again works, and the heater starts up.

With a clock attachment, a thermostat does even more, for it starts the heater early enough in the morning for the house to be warm by getting-up time. Also, at any desired hour in the evening, it will shut off the heater for the night. As showing the watchfulness of a thermostat, I recall an unusually cool spell in summer when on the Fourth of July, we awoke in the morning to find the radiators hot and the chill of the rooms pleasantly taken off.

For many years, both with steam and with hot air, when all heaters were stoked by hand, I had great satisfaction with thermostats. The labor of caring for the fire was reduced to putting on coal and shoveling ashes; there was no running downstairs to turn on the dampers when the house became too cool, or to shut them off when it began to overheat. I found also that in checking a fire at just the right time, there was a distinct saving in fuel.

An important point in automatic heat is the placing of the thermostat. In one house that I know, there was trouble because the upstairs rooms were never quite warm enough. On looking the place over, I found that the thermostat was on the wall of a small room, so near the boiler that its radiator was the first to heat. As a result, the room warmed up to the temperature at which the thermostat acted, long before the upstairs radiators had had time to heat. This was quickly proved to be the fault by turning off the radiator in the thermostat room. The permanent remedy was to remove the thermostat to the wall of a larger room, where the temperature was more nearly average for the entire house.

SMALLEST FOREST FIRE LOSS

Snow and rain during the first week of the deer hunting season helped clinch a new record for Michigan—the smallest forest fire loss in the state's history.

The slightly more than 14,000 acres which were burned over this year approximated 3,000 acres less than the previous low-loss of some 18,000 acres recorded in 1935. Considerable rainfall over much of the state during the summer, combined with the improved equipment and technique of the state's forest fire fighting organization were the main factors in holding the loss to a new low mark. On several occasions as much as a week passed without either a single fire or no more than one or two breaking out.

Although the summer ended with the loss well under the 1935 figure, there remained the possibility of serious fires occurring during the deer hunting season. With thousands of persons in the woods, the hunting season has more than once proved a hazardous period with destructive fires. Even wet weather preceding the hunting season is no guarantee of safety since a few dry days accompanied by winds can quickly set the stage for bad fires. This season the snow and rain which fell at the opening of the season dispelled the danger.

Every day the papers write of hunting accidents. "Hunter accidentally shot." "Rifle or shotgun explodes when hunter drops gun." And so on.

A loaded gun should not be taken into a house, hunting shack, or car. Many times some other person tries out the "sight," pulls the trigger, and a fatality is the result. Pulling a loaded gun through a fence by taking hold of the barrel is a dangerous stunt.

Do not clean a gun until you have made positive inspection of chamber and barrel. Never point a gun at anybody. It's a foolish and senseless action.

The supposedly unloaded gun is the gun that has killed many people. If you cannot handle a gun, stay away from it.

Antonio Stradivari Born in Cremona: Died at 98

Antonio Stradivari, the supreme violin-maker, was born in Cremona and passed his entire life there, rarely leaving its gates. A tall, spare figure of a man, he spent all his days at a bench littered with the tools of his trade, writes Ruth Wood Thompson in the New York Times.

In the year 1737 he came to the end of his labors. He was then ninety-eight years old. His body was laid in a sepulcher he had ordered to be built in the crypt of a church near his house. The plate on the tomb was removed when the church fell in ruins, and visitors can see it in the Cremona town hall.

Another commemorative tablet on the place where he lived and wrought his wonders declares Stradivari "brought the violin to its highest perfection and left Cremona an imperishable name as master of his craft."

This glowing declaration has never been disputed. Stradivari reached the heights as a designer of bow instruments. His patterns are the finest and his workmanship unrivaled.

Stradivari, at different times, utilized both native and foreign woods, paying attention always to the beauty of the grain as well as the quality. His crowning skill lay in the mixing of a filler and a varnish that kept the wood resonant and flexible and protected it from deterioration.

St. Swithin, Old Churchman
St. Swithin was one of our old English churchmen, being bishop of Winchester well over a thousand years ago, says London Answers Magazine. History states that he was of a very meek and humble disposition, and requested that, on his death, he should be buried outside the cathedral so that the rain, dripping from the eaves, would fall on his last resting-place. This request was fulfilled. A hundred years later someone perceived the idea that so notable a person should be within the building, and it was decided to re-inter him in a more worthy grave. On the day appointed—July 15—a great storm arose and continued for forty days, delaying the operations. From this has grown our legend that if it rains on St. Swithin's day (July 15) there will be rain on the forty days following.

Memorial Cairn

Not far from Braemar in Scotland is the Cairn of Remembrance, a heap of stones where the Clan Farquharson once gathered in time of war. Each man used to bring a stone and lay on the heap, and when the clan disbanded once more, each used to take another rock, leaving the rest of them as a memorial to those who died in battle.

Maple Forest

All the pupils have returned to school and their school work after their Thanksgiving vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Smith and family of Flint, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Howse and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bigham of Saginaw spent the holidays and week end visiting relatives and hunting.

Most all of the people who live here were lucky in filling their deer license.

George Thompson of Pontiac spent a few days with his sister, Mrs. Wm. Woodburn. He also enjoyed hunting while here.

Grace Woodburn of M.S.T.C., Mt. Pleasant, spent the holidays at home visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woodburn.

Sunday School has been closed on account of cold weather.

Bathtub in White House in '51, National Scandal

When Millard Filmore installed a bathtub in the White House in 1851 it was a national scandal, observes a writer in the Washington Star. Red-blooded Americans everywhere protested that the President was a sissy. He had introduced from Europe an abominable "monarchical luxury." If he felt he must take baths—an un-American practice, anyway—the White House bathtub was good enough for any man. Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson hadn't had bathtubs.

This is one of the striking examples of the conservatism of the public mind and its resistance to technological improvements which makes the future of any new idea unpredictable, cited by the National Resources committee in a report on technological trends.

Less than ten years before, according to Bernhard J. Stern of the National Resources committee, the Philadelphia Common council had come within two votes of passing an ordinance against bathing of any sort between November 1 and March 15. The allegedly growing practice was sapping the vitality of the citizenry. It was denounced as a menace to public health and decency.

At about the same time the degrading habit was getting a foothold in Virginia. Several Old Dominion towns imposed a tax of $30 on every bathtub in an effort to discourage the vile thing.

Source of Great Lakes Water
The supply of water in the Great Lakes is maintained by drainage from the area comprising the lake basin, about 300,000 square miles, of which 60 per cent is in this country and 40 per cent in Canada. The amount of water fed into the lakes by the hundreds of small rivers, streams and springs varies with the season; in April and May it has been estimated to average more than 50,000 cubic feet per second, and in November less than 20,000 cubic feet per second. The level of the lakes is determined by the balance between inflow and outflow; artificial outflow and evaporation from the surface of nearly 100,000 square miles. In the natural state each lake was an individual reservoir, maintaining its own level by natural dams at the outlets, but with blasting and digging to assist transportation, these have been modified and the artificial outlets such as the Chicago drainage canal, Welland canal, New York state barge canal, etc., also affect lake levels.

"The Lady With the Lamp"
Parental objections to nursing as an occupation almost prevented the start of a career that has never since been equaled in that profession. Annette Fiske tells of "Florence Nightingale, the Lady with the Lamp," in Hygeia, the Health Magazine. The objections were based on the conditions then existing which were not fit for a lady. Years were to pass before the family prejudice finally weakened enough for her to obtain her wish. During the intervening years, however, her view of life and people became widened, and this laid a broad foundation for her future work. By her work with the army, Miss Nightingale opened a career to women and proved their right to a place in military hospitals. All her efforts were exerted to make nursing a trained profession and to improve the medical administration in the army. Her notes on the hospital administration in the British army led to many reforms.

Ohio Once Fined Prison Keepers
In the Ohio criminal code enacted in 1815 one provision said the keeper of the penitentiary should be fined $50 for each prisoner who escaped. Legislators thought this penalty would make the keepers see that there were no escapes—or at least a minimum of escapes. Soon after the code's passage, however, so many persons thought this provision unfair that it was changed to read that a $50 reward was to be offered for the return of each escaped convict.

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

JUMPER THE HARE CONSULTS BUSTER BEAR

JUMPER THE HARE was sitting under a low growing hemlock tree deep in the Green Forest, where he could look out over the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Jumper was not feeling at all good that morning. No, sir; Jumper was feeling anything but good. In the first place, it was a long time since he had had a real good sleep. In the second place, he couldn't rest easily a minute even with his eyes wide open. All the time he felt as if his heart might jump right up in his throat any minute. And it was all because Reddy Fox had set out to catch him, and gave him no peace night or day.

"Old Mother Nature certainly takes better care of some than she does of others," thought Jumper, just a wee bit bitterly, as he watched Paddy the Beaver swimming about in his pond. "Now, there is Paddy, perfectly safe out there in the water, and here am I, not safe anywhere. It isn't fair. It certainly isn't fair."

Then Jumper looked and listened anxiously for the least sign of Reddy Fox. But all was quiet, and once more he began to think about the unfairness of Old Mother Nature. Now, that isn't a bit like Jumper the Hare. Jumper is almost as happy-go-lucky as Peter Rabbit, and takes things just as they come. It wasn't long before he began to feel a little ashamed of himself for having such thoughts. He thought of those long legs Old Mother Nature had given him to take him quickly out of danger, and then he remembered how Paddy the Beaver has to get his food on shore, or most of it anyway, and how slow and clumsy Paddy is out of the water. The more he thought of this the more ashamed he grew of the thoughts he had had of Old Mother Nature's seeming unfairness and pretty soon he knew right down in his heart that he wouldn't change places with Paddy the Beaver if he could, not even to get rid of Reddy Fox.

He was still thinking of this when a stick snapped a little way from him and his heart gave a great, frightened thump. You see, he had grown so anxious and nervous that whenever he heard a stick snap or a least rustle he was sure it was Reddy Fox trying to steal up on him. Jumper held his breath and looked in the direction from which the sound had come. There, shuffling along and muttering to himself, was Buster Bear. Jumper grinned. It was a very great relief to see Buster Bear instead of Reddy Fox. You see, Jumper isn't the least bit afraid of Buster, because he knows he can keep out of his way. Buster knows it, too, and so he wastes no time trying to catch Jumper.

Jumper hopped out and sat up in front of Buster Bear. Buster sat up, too. Very funny they looked as they faced each other, one so very big and one so small, and both sitting up in just the same way. Paddy the Beaver had to laugh as he looked across at them.

"Hello, Buster!" said Jumper. "How do you like the Green Forest?"

Buster's little eyes twinkled as he grinned down at Jumper. "Pretty well, Jumper; pretty well, so far. Seems to me you are looking thin. Yes, sir, you are looking thin. That ought not to be in the beautiful springtime in such a nice place as the Green Forest." Buster shook his head as if he didn't understand it at all.

"It's all your fault!" cried Jumper.

Buster Bear looked puzzled. "How is it my fault?" he demanded.

Then Jumper told him the whole story, how he had been sent to invite Buster to meet the other little people of the Green Forest, how Reddy Fox had tried to catch him, and then had been terribly frightened by the sudden appearance of Buster and had run, and then how he (Jumper) had run after him just for fun, and how all the little people were making fun of Reddy now, so that he was spending all his time trying to catch Jumper so as to get even. Buster's eyes twinkled more than ever as he listened. "Perhaps I can help you," said he.

"Oh, will you? That would be perfectly splendid!" cried Jumper.

The paper, "The Spanish Situation," written by Miss Margrethe Hemmingsen and read by Mrs. Holger Peterson, was full of very fine information on war conditions in Spain. Mrs. Gerald Poor gave an excellent talk on "In the Far East," which showed a fine knowledge of the China-Japan conflict.

RUBBED NOSES WITH BEAR

Lansing—The national business recession may be a "blessing in disguise," as the incurable optimist would call it, but it's just another administrative headache to Michigan's Governor Frank Murphy.

The reason is easy to find. The legislature's unreigned liberality left the budget $18,000,000 out of balance, the said budget being made in anticipation of $107,000,000 tax receipts.

With falling off of business, sales tax receipts on which the state depends for 58 per cent of its revenue have slumped $500,000 under the figure for last summer. And instead of the budget being only $3,000,000 in the red, as a result of appropriation trimming by Budget Director Harold Smith, the prospective deficit has been boosted to nearly $5,000,000.

More slashes are coming, so Smith warns, Governor Murphy is still determined, so it appears, to "balance the budget." And the outcome is being watched closely by politicians who, with an eye on the coming 1938 election, await the answers to (1) will Michigan's "New Deal" parallel the National "New Deal" with a financial deficit? (2) Will the budget, if balanced, be higher than previous state budgets—and if so, why?

Increased Payrolls

Leaders of the administration—Secretary of State Leon D. Case, State Treasurer Theodore I. Fry, and Auditor General George Gundry—have already indicated that the main reason for increased state payrolls in recent years is due to the voters' tendency of shifting local governmental responsibilities more and more upon the state.

If more money is needed for schools, highways, welfare, snow removal and other public services, then the Piper must be paid in the form of an increased budget, so the argument goes.

As the secretary of state pointed out at Grand Rapids, 3,000 employees have been added to the state payrolls in recent years to administer new departments and bureaus created by legislative enactment.

In reply to critics who point out that the state budget, even if balanced, represents higher expenditures for most departments than those of previous administrations, the Murphy aides are doing this bit of football "forward passing" to the voters: Consolidated local governments, less demands of local governments for state aid, and blame yourself for seeking more state help, new services, etc.

Cooking the Goose?

That the radical element in C.I.O. ranks have been "cooking their own goose" is a conclusion favored in official circles here.

Recent facts bear out the theory. U.A.W. workers in the Fisher Body plant at Lansing voted "100 per cent" against going on a strike at this time.

Cadillac plant employees rejected a strike plea.

Pontiac's small minority of 400 U.A.W. workers, who tried a sit-down strike last week and put 14,721 workers into payless idleness, evacuated the plant without benefit of music or cheers. The reception of fellow workers was decidedly hostile.

With winter advancing and jobs none too secure, organized labor in Michigan is becoming more conservative and stable. Wildcat strikes will be few, according to present indications.

If the business recession puts the brakes on radical labor leaders and excessive taxation, the optimist may be right, after all. Training for Jobs

One of the problems of the depression, so educators declare, is training young people to earn a living in the business and industrial world.

Congress recognized the need for vocational training when it passed a federal aid appropriation.

From Lansing has come word that the state department of public instruction, headed by Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, is formulating a program whereby public school training may be correlated with community needs. Apprenticeship courses at business and industrial concerns would be offered to high school students as a means of helping them to prepare for useful work after graduation.

Of the 1937 high school class at Plymouth, a suburb of Detroit, only 38 per cent continued educational studies, the remaining 64 per cent getting jobs in factories, stores, etc. The after-graduation percentage of the 1936 class was 23 per cent continuing education further, while 77 per cent sought to earn their own livelihood.

Adult Education

To provide apprenticeship courses for high school students, Dr. Elliott proposes, the community must have an understanding of the problem.

This situation implies that adult education is a corollary to any movement that seeks to extend public school training into the field of adult leadership.

That there is an "immediate and even desperate need for adult education" is the contention of Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan, who outlined a six-point program for "community colleges" in a recent address to newspaper editors at Ann Arbor. Dr. Ruthven envisions "off campus community colleges" offering "instruction which would be serious and progressive and include both postgraduate technical training and cultural education."

The plan is one answer to the modern question: "What shall I do with my leisure time?" It is an outgrowth of the short week, unemployment, and early retirement of workers.

Michigan Housing

On Wednesday, Dec. 8, a housing conference will be held in Lansing.

Convening at the state capital will be the Michigan Housing and Planning Council. The immediate objective is an amendment to the state housing enabling act so that all cities and towns may enjoy the benefit of federal funds for slum clearance projects and to be ready for an anticipated new federal housing program.

The Michigan law, at present, excludes all cities other than Detroit.

If the state act is amended as housing leaders propose, a Michigan municipality could form an independent non-partisan housing authority with power to borrow money from the federal government and build and rent modern homes for workers in the low salary bracket.

In Detroit business corporations are ready to release millions of dollars at 2½ per cent interest for municipal housing projects if the federal government would meet security terms, according to Mrs. Josephine Gomon, director of the Detroit Housing Commission.

40 Miles to Gallon

General Motors corporation is producing in its English plant, the Vauxhall Motor company at Luton, a four cylinder, 10 horsepower, light-weight car that is guaranteed to give at least 40 miles to the gallon.

According to Detroit motor gossip, the English experiment may be followed in a year or so in this country. In fact, the G.M., Ford and Chrysler companies are said to have low cost cars in various stages of engineering development and are ready, as soon as circumstances warrant, to effect volume production.

The Diesel engine, too, is another ace in the hole for possible development in Michigan's motor car industry.

As 90 per cent of all automobiles manufactured in the world come from Michigan factories, these engineering experiments are of undisputable importance.

Our sincere appreciation is extended to our neighbors and friends, who were so kind to us during our late bereavement, and for the beautiful expressions of sympathy.

Believe-or-Not Story Is Related in Adirondacks

Many legends, some of them recorded for posterity in glibly written phrases, others still retold only by word of mouth in the homely fashion of natives, exist of AuSable, Chasm, N. Y., named for the famous two-mile gorge formed by the AuSable river as it rushes through on its way to Lake Champlain, says a writer in the New York World-Telegram.

One story goes that, at the narrowest point in the chasm, where the river becomes an angry torrent, a bridge once spanned the forty feet from towering cliff to cliff. This crossing was allowed to decay, however, even though the rude and simple framework was the only span for miles along the river. At the time of the tale it had just offered its last bit of resistance to the elements and had tumbled headlong into the churning waters, only a single beam remaining.

One night following, a Max Morgan, a clergyman just returned from abroad, where he had spent several years, set out to ride on horseback to the home of old friends on the opposite side of the chasm. As he proceeded toward the chasm darkness fell and a mist settled close to the ground. Knowing nothing of the ruin of the bridge, he confidently urged his horse to go on, let loose the reins, and abandoned himself to reverie.

Horse and rider approached the river (Morgan could hear it dashing below) and what he thought was the bridge. Suddenly the animal stopped, quivering and panting, as if sensing impending disaster. Aroused now from his lethargy but still unaware of the danger Morgan encouraged the horse to go on. Finally the steed responded, picked his way across the precariously lodged single bar to the other side, and then, believe it or not, trotted to his destination, with his rider unperturbed.

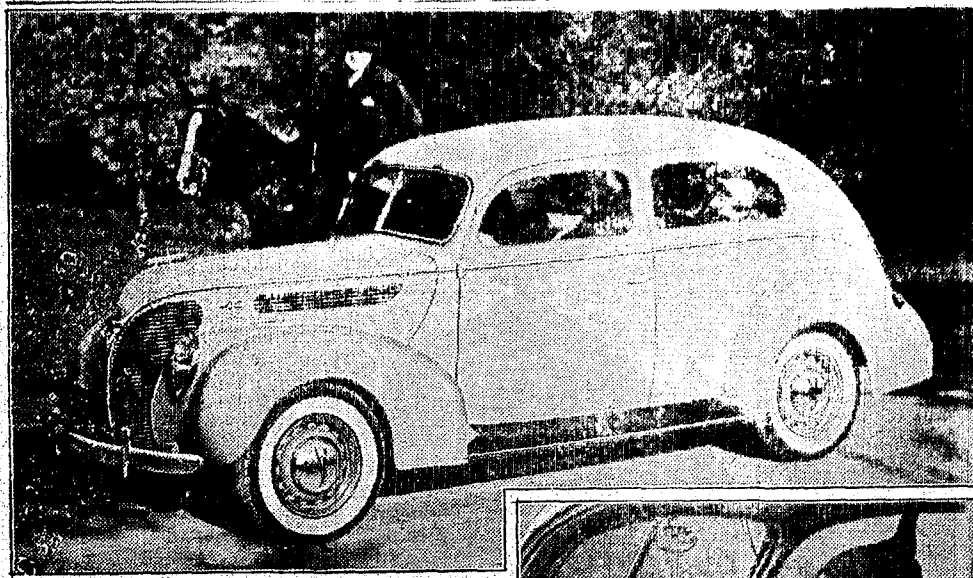

Notice

After December 10th I will be at the Court House to collect township taxes on Fridays and Saturdays from 9:00 until 4:00 o'clock, and on Tuesday of each week I will be at the George Skingley home down the river.

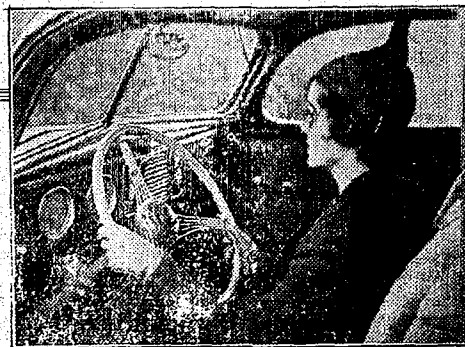

Mrs. Nettie Stephan, Treasurer.

Two 1938 Ford V-8 Cars Displayed

TWO distinct lines of Ford V-8 cars are now being displayed in dealer showrooms. One is a newly-styled standard Ford line in three body types, the other a de luxe Ford line in eight body types. The de luxe Tudor sedan is pictured above. The de luxe sedans are larger in appearance, with longer hood and sweeping lines. The de luxe cars are powered with the 85 horsepower V-8 engine, the standard cars with either the 85 or the 60 horsepower engines. Newly-styled interiors are pictured at right. New instrument panel has instrument group in front of driver, grille for radio speaker installation in center, flanked by engine controls and cigar lighter, and glove compartment at right. In the de luxe cars, the compartment locks, and a clock is recessed in the compartment door.

A headlight beam control is fitted on the toe-board, a tell-tale light on instrument panel indicates whether the headlight beams are raised or depressed.

CHANGED NAME TO "HAN- SON REFUGE"

The name "Crawford Game Refuge" posted on the border of the Hanson State Military reservation has been changed to the "Hanson Refuge."

This change was made at request of some of our local citizens who felt that since the land, comprising 18,000 acres, was given to the state for military and conservation purposes by the late Rasmus Hanson that his identity with this wonderful project would eventually become lost were his name not continued.

About a year ago signs appeared along border lines designating the place as "Crawford County Game Refuge." This is now changed, as mentioned above, and we feel that the request of the local people was well founded, and we are pleased that the Conservation commission were in agreement.

OBSERVES BIRTHDAY AN- NIVERSARY

Horace Shaw was a year older Friday and in observance of the occasion a company of friends from Bay City and Detroit came to spend the week end and help him to celebrate. Some arrived on Friday, others Saturday, so that they had a houseful of guests at their Lake Margrethe home. Feasting and making merry made it a memorable occasion, that will not soon be forgotten either by the guest of honor nor guests who were present.

Those who came to be here for the occasion from Bay City were Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rae, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Haire, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schmidt. From Detroit there were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morley, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Koerper and Mrs. Fred Mutton.

FORMER RESIDENT DIES

Irving Towns, a former resident of Grayling and the husband of the former Flossie McEvers, died suddenly at his home in Drayton Plains, Mich., at 11:00 o'clock on Thanksgiving night from a heart attack. When the young man lived in Grayling he worked for the late Waldemar Jensen as painter. For several years he has been a foreman in the Pontiac Motor Co. plant in Pontiac.

Surviving the deceased are his widow and two children, Margie and James, and a brother, Henry, of Flint.

Relatives from Grayling in attendance at the funeral, which was held Monday, included Mrs. Edna McEvers, sons Calvin and Ivan and daughter Virginia, William McEvers, Mr. and Mrs. Harry McEvers, Mr. and Mrs. Roy McEvers and Mrs. Neil McEvers.

Patented the Tape Measure
The first patent on a tape measure was granted to Alvin J. Fellows in 1868. The tape was enclosed in a circular case, with a spring clock that held the tape at any desired length.

Charlie in Toyland

None other than the very sophisticated Charlie McCarthy, wooden pal of Ventriloquist Edgar Bergen, is pictured here as he visited the toy center in New York for the preview of good things for Christmas of 1937. Alex Wanamaker, five, is enacting the role of Charlie's boss here.

Pepper, Peppers Unrelated

Pepper and peppers are entirely unrelated botanically. From the East Indian variety comes both "black" and "white" pepper, the latter being produced by added refining from the former. From the American family comes "cayenne" pepper and the tabasco in tabasco sauce, as well as the various red and green vegetables which play such a part in Mexican cooking.

School Notes

The Red Cross drive that has been carried on in the Grayling schools the past few weeks is now completed. Each grade contributing $1.00 or more receives a Red Cross sticker and each individual is presented with a Red Cross pin. This year all the grades joined and for another year the faculty has 100% membership.

A girl's basketball league has been started and plans are under way to carry this intramural sport thru the winter.

Under the sponsorship of the Hi-Y Club, several reels of motion pictures will be shown to the assembly. These pictures were secured thru the courtesy of the Goodrich Rubber Co., which offers a large variety of educational films for the use of schools, churches, etc.

Grayling can claim the unique distinction of having 8 sets of twins attending school this year. While this may not be a record, yet it is rather unusual. Incidentally an aunt and her nephew both attend kindergarten this year. Dorrine Thompson, the aunt, is younger than her nephew Conrad Thompson.

Two Commanders Killed

Capt. Samuel Blythe commanded the brig Boxer, which was engaged in 1813 by the American brig Enterprise, commanded by William Burrows. At the first exchange of broadsides, both commanders fell; Blythe was killed instantly, Burrows was mortally wounded. The Boxer was raked until it surrendered, then taken into Portland as a prize.
